

Secret Agent in A Flap

In the middle of the American capital, chaos was caused by a sharp man in a slick jacket, deep aqua blue eyes and brown hair. The main cause of the problem was a pigeon who was obsessed with a bagel on the eleventh of January 2021. But what really caused everything to unfold?

A rocket ship was unveiled inside Washington's favourite landmark which was then torn to quarters. People were panicking all around Washington as a rocket was launched up into the sky. Scientists believe it was heading straight for Moscow but luckily it exploded leaving an enormous ash cloud circling the enormous city. People have told us that they saw an agent flying on a suitcase while a pigeon tried to block his final shot!

Eyewitnesses say that it was all caused by a random pigeon who craved a plain bagel. Confusment between the agent and the pigeon caused the knuckle headed pigeon to get stuck in the suitcase in the first instance.

We took two interviews; first we will go to a witness who was chased by a jumping suitcase, Gail Storms.

"So, I was going to meet my friend Mandaloria when a mysterious suitcase chased me the other way. I saw a giant missile launch up into the sky then Mandaloria drove past straight into a burning car. As I ran over to help her the missile exploded and as I pulled her back out debris blew me away from Mandaloria. She had burns all over her arms and legs, but I had just rescued my friend...I don't know who did this, but they should be brought to justice."

Next, we interviewed the American president, Joe Biden.

"How can this awful thing happen to our beloved country? I had no part in organising this calamity, but I did help to save our capital...I called on the finest bread shop in Washington for a seedy slice of bread, and when it arrived, I ordered my general to deploy the slice of bread at the pigeon. This distracted him at the crucial moment so that the missile could be destroyed."

Police are looking into the incident around the clock. Mysteriously, the pigeon was not found at the scene of the crime. Gail and her friend are coughing up debris and crumbs in hospital but should recover soon. The man in the mysterious suit is on the run from angry Russians and he is believed to be heading for New York. The Russians have stated if it happens again, they will declare war.
