

Champion cyclist Henri was racing to the finish line. No one else within sight. pop psssssssssssst a sharp rock had pierced his tyre he couldn't deal with this now he was so close to the finish line, but now he was so far. So now he had to exit the race. crackle lightning struck rain poured down. He ran with his bike through the sheets of rain! He finally reached a bus stop drenched to the core. The next bus home was in half an hour he knew what to do so he did it. He called a taxi when he got home he realized he lost all air in his tyre, so he got out his repair kit and fixed it luckily. He was quick at his work. He had finished he pedalled to the metal to get back into the race. Luckily he was only in 5th so he used every ounce of his body to carry on, and he climbed positions into first and... he crossed the finish line to everyone's delight!